Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Billy Joel once called it an acoustic nightmare. Rodger Waters called the place a real compromise. And Robert Plant said, This is the first gig I've ever done that was rained out inside the building. However, what they might not have understood at the time was that this place was a temple to all of us in South Florida. It was a sacred place where we would gather and worship at the altar of Hard Rock. It was where we went to hear angels sing. It was the place the rock god Brian Johnson screamed out, Oh, Let there be rock! I am talking about the Hollywood Sportatorium in the 1980s. I'm talking about a place in Rock n Roll history that existed for 18 years as the only venue of its kind in all of South Florida to see rock music live. The Hollywood Sportatorium, or The Sporto as we called it, was the venue in South Florida where everyone came to play like Bon Jovi, Cinderella, Def Leppard, Guns N Roses, Iron Maiden, Judas Priest, Motley Crue, Night Ranger, Poison, Quiet Riot, Ratt, Triumph, Foreigner, Twisted Sister and Van Halen just to name a handful. It was the place where we would all go to see all of our favorite bands. If you were a rock band and you never played the Sporto, then you just hadn't made it to the top like Foreigner sang about in the song Jukebox Hero. The Sporto was an arena that held 15,532 rock souls and was THE place for live rock concerts in South Florida. The building does not exist anymore. However, it...
