Dimensions: 9.7in. x 7.4in. x 0.1in.GAO reviewed whether: (1) federal agencies are depreciating transportation infrastructure, research and development (R and D), and human capital investments for accounting and budgeting purposes; and (2) depreciation of these investments could be useful in federal budgeting. GAO found that: (1) the federal government generally does not depreciate transportation infrastructure, R and D, and human capital investments for accounting or budgeting purposes; (2) Congress and the Administration are considering budgeting alternatives to decrease the annual federal deficit and increase long-term federal investments; (3) budget and accounting experts do not support depreciating these investments for budgeting purposes, since it is difficult to determine the value and useful life of such investments; (4) depreciation in accounting is complex and involves such key factors as the assets value, its useful life, and its salvage value; (5) federal agencies do not depreciate assets they do not own because it is difficult to link federal grant money to the value of a specific asset; (6) although economists depreciate infrastructure and R and D investments to generate national economic wealth estimates, the problems of determining ownership or control of assets are not relevant in these analyses; and (7) private businesses use depreciation primarily to match revenues with expenses for a given period and for tax purposes.
