L. 1017. record where the punishment worked a reformation. Under the brief experience of the Municipal Court with its new powers, there has still been developed no treatment for the confirmed cases except incarceration. With the younger cases, however, much is accomplished. Where necessary, medical treatment is given. Cases of feeble-mindedness are discovered and sent to proper institutions,6 and every effort is made by the probation officers to change the environment and remove the delinquent to an atmosphere where improvement seems possible. When stated in cold legal terms of jurisdiction, the creation of the Municipal Court might not seem to be of great social importance, yet when the currents of thought which caused its creation are understood and when it is realized that the court itself in its organization and practice has caught the new social vision, the institution of...
