As many patentees have been eminently successful, and as a happy hit has sometimes brought wealth and distinction, multitudes are induced to follow the example of their inventive predecessors, and ultimately to find themselves less fortunate, if not less capable, than those whom they attempted to rival. The evils arising from a want of information can never be, in any considerable degree, removed. Something can and should be done for the dissemination of knowledge; bu knowledge sufficiently comprehensive and minute to guard against the reproduction of things old, and guide uniformly or generally, to that which is new and useful, has never been possessed by inventors as a class, and never can be possessed...
